North Scituate bakery devoted to cupcakes

May 02, 2012

The Boston Globe

South Shore residents who have been craving Maggie Warshaw's chocolate cake since the closing of Maggie's Corner in Cohasset some five years ago will be glad to hear they can find that legendary confection at Baked, her daughter Jennifer Warshaw's latest venture in North Scituate. Besides making inventive cupcakes, cookies, and breakfast treats for Baked, the younger baker also operates the breakfast and lunch cafe 5 South Main in Cohasset.

Jennifer Warshaw and her mother, Maggie, with a tray of vanilla and chocolate... (PhotDebee Tlumacki for...)

Jennifer Warshaw is unabashedly devoted to cupcakes ($2.50 to $3). Her bakery recently earned first place in South Shore Living's Cupcake Battle for Rasputin, a dark chocolate cupcake filled with bittersweet chocolate pudding and raspberry jam, frosted with cream cheese petals, and topped with dark chocolate pearls and a fresh raspberry stuffed with yet more bittersweet chocolate pudding. Other favorites in the new spot include tantalizing sweet-salty sea salt caramel, and Boston cream pie, a cool mix of custard and cake dipped in hard chocolate, with a smiley face on top. Industrial-size crispy rice treats, whoopie pies, brownies, and homemade jams are also here. Cookies are exclusively Maggie's, in flavors such as mocha madness, oatmeal almond, and ginger snap. The cozy space, painted in soft red and periwinkle, is reminiscent of a farmhouse kitchen. Maggie's chocolate cake mix and scone mixes are packaged in milk bottles; cookies are in glass jars. Warshaw is thinking about a third business: a mobile cupcake venue in the area. Baked, 763 Country Way, Scituate, 781-378-2730, www.bakedthings.com.
